

ATTENTION COACHES:

Are you ready to sideline cash payments?

When you and your players take to the road, do you travel with a safe of money earmarked for expenses? If so, you already know the downside of carrying all that cash:

Not Simple

Handing out meal money is complicated, inefficient, and eats up valuable coaching time. Plus once that money is in your players' hands, accurate record keeping is a long shot at best.

Not Secure

Wherever your team travels, the cash you carry makes you a target for undesirable attention. And if players' money is lost or stolen, you can't reimburse them due to NCAA rules.

Not Compliant

Once you're back at school, it's hard to collect receipts from students focused on homework catch-up. Without a paper trail, post-trip reconciliation can quickly become a big headache.

The bottom line? Handling expenses with cash is complex, insecure, and non-compliant. Cash is already falling out of favor everywhere you look ... Isn't it time your team got in the cash-free game?

Consumers Are Benching Their Greenbacks

According to a 2018 Pew Research Center report, roughly 3 in 10 Americans make no cash purchases in a typical week. Among college-age consumers that percentage is even lower, with 1 in 10 millennials exclusively favoring cards and digital wallets over cash.
